UCITS Multi Asset Class Portfolio (Class B)

February 2019

Monthly Report

Equity markets remained robust in February, extending the rally that began shortly before the New Year. Looking more deeply within relative performance between sectors either side of December's deep falls, we see considerable divergence. Global Healthcare and Consumer Staples have recorded negative returns in USD over this period (of -1.7% and -0.3% respectively between the beginning of December and the end of February). The fact that the strongest performing sector has been Materials (+5.8%) is suggestive that a short-term positive change in sentiment toward the global cycle has been the principal driver of returns.

What fundamental changes, if any, have driven this? First and foremost we point to the change in tone and content of comments emanating from the Governor of the Federal Reserve: indicating that the reduction of liquidity support is no longer "on auto-pilot" and that the progression of upwards interest rates is on pause. Secondly, there is growing confidence that the trade disputes between China and the US is not an epochal battle for 21st century hegemony but a more transactional tit-for-tat that President Trump may seek to bring to a close, undercutting the ardent trade hawks on his own side. We ourselves share this view.

Within the equity allocation in the portfolio, Global Leaders accounted for the largest positive contribution at +0.96%. Secondly, the allocation to early stage growth and technology companies managed by Baillie Gifford (+0.51%).

Within Asia, it was more mixed. We topped up the allocation to Matthews China Small Companies in January which proved to be good timing as the main Chinese Index the CSI300 fell 25% in 2018 and has risen 26% in the first two months of this year. Better news on trade was one factor driving this, plus moves by the MSCI Index provider to boost weightings of Chinese stocks within global indices. India has been a less happy place this year. We are in election year and the normal pump priming you would expect is delivering less and delivering late. 7 basis points (0.07%) were shed in that position.

Also, meaningfully for a global portfolio whose principal reporting class is GBP has been the recovery of the value of the pound: +3.9% YTD. Early in the year, we took the view that GBP had become sensitive to good news which is generally construed as a slowing or softening of the BREXIT process and so have been increasing the hedge back to GBP in the portfolio to mitigate the effects of a rising pound. This has been helpful at the margin whilst not eliminating all the drag.

Part of the policy to mitigate volatility in portfolio returns is the periodic use of equity index put options. In rising markets these lose value. As the insurance premium is paid away, they lost value, as they did in January. Their maturity dates have been extended so can be helpful in the event the rally tops out and gives back some of its gains.
